House Calls

The Coronavirus (COVID-19) pandemic has changed the way we live our lives, but it has not changed the way we take care of each other as a community. The staff at Lake Chelan Community Hospital and Lake Chelan Clinic have been working diligently to keep up with the many changes and recommendations by local, state and federal requirements implemented because of COVID-19. We want to assure you that your safety is our top priority when you visit LCCHC. The way you access care with us may not be what you are accustomed to, but be assured that we are here to take care of your health care needs.

The staff at LCCHC is thankful for the outpour of generosity from the community. There is a long list of people and business that have shared extra supplies and have made and donated face masks. Thank you to Campbell’s, 12 Tribes Colville Casinos, Starbucks, Ryan & Tracy Greene from Country Financial, and Lake Chelan Artisan Bakery for the delicious lunches and pastries provided to the hospital and clinic staff. We appreciate all that you do to support healthcare workers and supporting the local businesses. Thank you!

Jordana was elected to the LCCHC board in 2019 and Mary Murphy was elected in 2015. Congratulations to both commissioners for their achievement and dedication to serve on the Lake Chelan Community Hospital Board.
Coping with COVID-19 by John Arnold, Ph.D., LCCHC Psychologist

The COVID-19 outbreak has led to unprecedented changes in the way we live our lives. As a result of social distancing and stay at home directives to prevent exposure to the virus, people can feel alone and isolated. The outbreak has generated great stress and uncertainty. Struggles with job loss, finances and separation from important others are just a few of the challenges. It’s a situation that has led people to become more worried, anxious and irritable than usual. Such feelings are normal and expected in a situation like this. The question, however, becomes what to do about it?

The good news is that there are positive steps one can take to better manage the stress that has resulted from all of this. For instance:

- Limit the amount of time spent watching the news and find reliable sources of information about the pandemic
- Become aware of how the stress is affecting you – both physically, emotionally and behaviorally – and then do something about it. For example, if you are at home, make a plan for the day and follow it rather than sit and fret about what might happen in the future
- Do what you can on any given day to manage finances and then let go of financial worry until the next day
- Take care of your physical health by getting enough sleep, eating well and getting some exercise
- Keep in touch with friends and family by phone or computer

There is certainly more to do to take care of yourself while waiting for the impacts of the virus to lessen, but try to keep in mind that the situation will improve and none of us is alone in being affected by it.

Lake Chelan Clinic provider Beverly La Mar (photo to the left) was the guest speaker for the women’s heart health Annual Red Dress Luncheon, which is an event sponsored by the Lake Chelan Health and Wellness Foundation. Beverly, a certified family nurse practitioner, delivered an engaging presentation reviewing the top ten preventable deaths during the luncheon held February 28th, 2020 at Sorrento’s.

Lake Chelan Hospital EMS provided free blood pressure and glucose screenings during the event. In addition a variety of hospital staff volunteers modeled a variety of new spring fashions as part of the annual fashion show presented by Main Street Gallery. This year’s luncheon was well attended with a headcount of just over 50.

Beverly La Mar was working to provide a second presentation for the community in March, but unfortunately had to be put on hold due to the COVID-19 limitations and restrictions.

Spring Into Health 90-Day Challenge

The annual health challenge started off to a great start in March with over 150 participants from around the valley. 2020 made it the 7th year that Lake Chelan Community Hospital (LCCH) put on a health challenge to encourage and support better health. Come New Years many of us have set resolutions to get healthy, eat better, lose weight or maybe even join the gym. It’s not long before we realize that it takes much self-discipline and accountability to stay committed. It’s easy to quit and for that reason, LCHHC with funding from the Lake Chelan Health and Wellness Foundation (LCHWF) we have helped many people in the valley reach their health goals.

In 2018 the LCHWF, with the help of a grant, purchased the Inbody 270 body composition analyzer. The free scan that each participant received provided a full page of results that help with monitoring weight, muscle mass, fat and water along the way. Learn more

Because of the COVID-19 restrictions and limitations additional scans for the challenge have been postponed. June 5th and 6th ends the challenge and we hope to be able to accommodate Inbody scans for weigh out results as planned.

For questions, please email Agustin Benegas at abenegas@lcch.net. Stay tuned.

Top 71 CIO’s To Know | Ross Heard, CIO

Ross Hurd, Chief Information Officer at Lake Chelan Community hospital is one of 71 CIOs to know. Hurd was recognized for the eighth time as one of the Nation’s Community Hospital CIOs to Know by Becker’s Healthcare. The newest and latest technologies are essential, especially in rural communities, to improving health care access to small communities and connecting patients to specialists outside the Lake Chelan Valley.

The recognized CIOs were set apart by outstanding recognition they’ve earned and exciting new projects they’re piloting. One of Hurd’s most recent implemented projects was the hospital’s telestroke program, which gives Lake Chelan providers real-time, 24/7 access to Seattle-based Swedish Medical Center’s stroke team.

Why is the telestroke partnership important? When a patient is having a stroke, there is only a three-hour window of time to receive tPA, a crucial clot-busting medication, after the onset of a stroke. This medicine can stop or decrease stroke damage. In the past, a patient had to wait until arrival at a hospital in Spokane or Seattle to get tPA, and then it was often too late to prevent paralysis, speech problems and other brain deficiencies.

Thanks to LCCHC’s TeleStroke partnership with Seattle’s Swedish Medical Center, you can get the medicine within minutes of arrival at our emergency room (ER). Hurd has served as LCCHC CIO since 2006.

2019 Community Health Needs Assessment Adopted

In December of 2019, the Lake Chelan Community Hospital and Clinics (LCCHC) Commissioners adopted the 2019-2021 Community Health Needs Assessment (CHNA) report. Every three years, LCCHC and regional partners from Chelan, Douglas, Grant and Okanogan counties collaborate to better understand the health needs of North Central Washington communities.

With the enactment of the Federal Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act in 2010, not-for profit hospitals were required to develop a Community Health Needs Assessment (CHNA) once every three years. Along with the region, LCCHC developed its last CHNA in 2016. The four highest priority needs identified at that time were mental health care access, access to health care, education and obesity. The 2019 CHNA highest priority needs identified were access to care (behavioral and physical health), affordable housing, chronic disease, education, and substance abuse.

Results from CHNA reports help hospitals and other regional health organizations strategize and focus resources to impacting the CHNA identified health needs. To access CHNA reports visit https://lakechelancommunityhospital.com/chna/

A TIME TO PAUSE

I have been forced to slow down during the current crisis, all of us have slowed down. There are a lot of things that are different. There isn’t much traffic on the roads, grocery stores aren’t that busy, and checkout seems to take longer but it doesn’t matter, it is no concern.

Many in our community are thinking about healthcare workers, the hospital and clinics. During a time when their businesses have been negatively impacted by this crisis, organizations like Campbells Resort, 12 Tribes Casinos, and Country Financial have provided lunches for our entire staff. They spent a lot of money to feed us, to show their appreciation for our great work and dedication. It is the hardest time to do something like this, it is a big deal and we at Lake Chelan Community Hospital & Clinics appreciate these acts of kindness, they encourage us to continue to provide the best care to our community during these difficult times.

It is a moment in time when we should pause and reflect on the wonderful community we live in.
